arguments for the existence of God thought that all, or even most, believers ought to believe on the basis of those arguments, or that conversion always required accepting those arguments as cogent.

The Existence of God Richard Swinburne

the existence of human freedom and responsibility leads to the existence of a God, the guarantor of good and evil, the Creator, the Law-maker, and the one who rewards and punishes. The Existence of God

The Existence of God - multimedia.opusdei.org

To say 'God is not omnipotent' is a contradiction (because omnipotence is part of the concept of God), but to say 'God does not exist' is not a contradiction. The only escape would be to say that it is impossible to contemplate the non-existence of God, because this unique concept contains "all reality".
