Turning Toward Philosophy: Literary Device and Dramatic Structure in Plato's Dialogues Sometimes it seems that Platonic scholarship follows Hegelian lines. The dominant trend (thesis), as exemplified by Gregory Vlastos and his followers, pays close attention to the logical structure of arguments but has little to say about character development or dramatic detail.

Let us admit it: there is a will to power in nomenclature, as well as in people or texts. A new term opens for its proponents a space in language. A critical concept or system is a "poor" poem of the intellectual imagination. The battle of the books is also an ontic battle against death.

The secret is turning towards. I think this is a pretty incredible piece of data. It suggests that there is something you can do today that will dramatically change the course of your relationship. More importantly, it suggests that there is something that you can not do that will lead to its demise. So, how do you turn towards instead of away?
